Roelofs Humboldt Fisheries Endowed Award

Dr. Terry Roelofs, Emeritus Professor of Fisheries Biology at Humboldt State University, has inspired and mentored numerous cohorts of fisheries students since his arrival at HSU in 1970. Terry has the rivers and streams of the North Coast running through his veins and has tirelessly shared his love of fisheries and sustainable fishing with his many students and colleagues.

We are seeking donations to this award, which was originally established by The Humboldt Fishin' Lumberjacks, a group of HSU Fisheries Alumni that have met annually since 2002 to share quality fishing time together. The goal of the award is to provide scholarships for students pursuing an advanced degree in fisheries at HSU with a focus on fisheries conservation and enhancement research that applies to or is in North Coast watersheds and adjacent marine waters.

The award is established with Cal Poly Humboldt Foundation and it's easy to contribute online or by check. For more information on how to contribute, please go to <https://giving.humboldt.edu/roelofs-humboldt-fisheries-endowed-award>, where you can donate securely online.

You may also contact Andrew Hampton ah879@gmail.com 714-337-1756.

Your donation will assist students in the Fisheries Department at Cal Poly Humboldt, with our first annual scholarship awarded in 2015.
